Introduction.

In this activity, we will give an elevator pitch, since in previous activities we researched the structure and main elements of an elevator pitch, as well as looking at some examples and how it should be done without mistakes, since it should not take more than a minute and a half. We must capture the attention of the person we are talking to at that time, removing unimportant information in order to be quick and concise. We will write an example of an elevator pitch and explain the context of how we use this method to introduce ourselves to someone, showcase our skills, and convince them that we are the best candidate among the others. We will do this in a practical way by recording an audio of an elevator pitch and practicing this method to communicate quickly and concisely to convince the person, as well as being able to practice English pronunciation and the grammatical structure of the different practices.

Description.

With the previous activities, we reviewed the grammar of our English text, researched what an elevator pitch is and its structure, and carried out various investigations to find out exactly how an elevator pitch is composed. We also need to be able to deliver one quickly, concise, and fluent, as well as understand how to write one, since in this activity we will have to put the elevator pitch into practice in writing, as we will record an audio file saying our elevator pitch, as well as review the text for errors and make some corrections to the elevator pitch, since our audio file must be longer than 30 seconds but less than a minute and a half, as an elevator pitch should be quick, and we must understand what we are trying to communicate and omit information that is not important, since we have little time to communicate with the other person.

Justification.

We will record an audio file saying our elevator pitch that we wrote in the previous activity, with the aim of putting into practice what we learned in the first activities, since we now know the structure of our elevator pitch as well as how long it should be. We will do this exercise to practice our English as well as our elevator pitch, since this method will help us get hired by a company by demonstrating why we are the best option, as well as putting into practice the creation of an elevator pitch in context, taking into account what we wrote in the previous activity, where we wrote an elevator pitch for a keyboard brand in order to collaborate with them on some activities and that be able to be chosen as the best option among the other candidates, since we have to convince them in a short period of time and be able to tell a lot of important information so that they consider us the best option.

Development.

Script of the elevator pitch

Good afternoon, my name is Edgar, and I am building a community on TikTok, Twitch and my Discord, where people not only consume my content but also participate. The idea of collaborating with your brand is to create experiences, challenges, live events, and rewards that will give more exposition to your product. Discord gives us something that other's platforms don't, attention and feedback, and is widely used in the gaming industry. Together, we can expand your brand's reach and expand your community, as well as create new experiences.
Let's set up a meeting next week to go over what we do and how we can help

Conclusion.

We recorded our elevator pitch audio that we wrote in the last activity, as well as making some adjustments and modifications to the text to add a little more information and correct some errors in grammar and structure. This allowed us to create a proper elevator pitch and record the audio without mistakes. In the activities we did, we learned the structure of an elevator pitch, how to write it correctly, and its characteristics. This will help us communicate with others by presenting them with quick and concise information about why we are the best candidate compared to others. We will also be able to practice our English and familiarize ourselves with the pronunciation of words, as well as practice the elevator pitch for a professional setting. This audio recording of the elevator pitch can be used to practice conveying the information in less than 2 minutes, but more than 30 seconds, within the estimated time we have to talk to someone in an elevator.
